Section 1: GENERAL PRINCIPLES

This chapter is intended to provide a policy framework to direct needed and inevitable change in our justice system without compromising our commitment to both public protection and the preservation of individual rights. CSAC supports improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the California justice systems without compromising the quality of justice.

A. The Role of Counties

33

The unit of local government that is responsible for the administration of the justice system must be close enough to the people to allow direct contact, but large enough to achieve economies of scale. While acknowledging that the state has a constitutional responsibility to enact laws and set standards, California counties are uniquely suited to continue to have major responsibilities in the administration of justice. However, the state must recognize differences arising from variations in population, geography, industry, and other demographics and permit responses to statewide problems to be tailored to the needs of individual counties.

34

41
42

We believe that delegation of the responsibility to provide a justice system is meaningless without provision of adequate sources of funding.

Section 2: LEGISLATIVE AND EXECUTIVE MATTERS

A. Board of Supervisors Responsibilities

45
46
47

It is recognized that the state, and not the counties, is responsible for trial court operations costs and any growth in those costs in the future. Nevertheless, counties continue to be responsible for justice-related services, such as, but not limited to, probation, prosecutorial and defense services, as well as the provision of local juvenile and adult detention facilities. Therefore, county board of supervisors should have budget control over all executive and administrative elements of local justice programs for which we continue to have primary responsibility.

B. Law Enforcement Services

While continuing to provide the full range of police services, county sheriffs should move in the direction of providing less costly specialized services, which can most effectively be managed on a countywide basis. Cities should provide for patrol and emergency services within their limits or spheres of influence. However, where deemed mutually beneficial to counties and cities, it may be appropriate to establish contractual arrangements whereby a county would provide law enforcement services within incorporated areas. Counties should maintain maximum flexibility in their ability to contract with municipalities to provide public safety services.

C. District Attorney Services

The independent, locally-elected nature of the district attorney must be protected. This office must have the capability and authority to review suspected violations of law and bring its conclusions to the proper court.

1 D. Victim Indemnification

2 Government should be responsive to the needs of victims. Victim indemnification should be a state
3 responsibility, and the state should adopt a program to facilitate receipt of available funds by victims,
4 wherever possible, from the perpetrators of the crime who have a present or future ability to pay,
5 through means that may include, but are not limited to, long-term liens of property and/or long-term
6 payment schedules.

7
8 E. Witness Assistance

9 Witnesses should be encouraged to become more involved in the justice system by reporting crime,
10 cooperating with law enforcement, and participating in the judicial process. A cooperative 11 anonymous witness program funded jointly by local government and the state should be encouraged, 12 where appropriate, in local areas.

13 F. Grand Juries

14 Every grand jury should continue to have the authority to report on the needs of county offices, but 15 no such office should be investigated more than once in any two-year period, unless unusual
16 circumstances exist. Grand juries should be authorized to investigate all local government agencies, 17 not just counties. Local government agencies should have input into grand jury reports on non-
18 criminal matters prior to public release. County officials should have the ability to call the grand jury 19 foreman and his or her representative before the board of supervisors, for the purpose of gaining 20 clarification on any matter contained in a final grand jury report. Counties and courts should work 21 together to ensure that grand jurors are properly trained and that the jury is provided with an 22 adequate facility within the resources of the county and the court.

23
24 G. Public Defense Services

25 Adequate legal representation must be provided for indigent persons as required by constitutional,
26 statutory, and case law. Such representation includes both criminal and mental health conservatorship 27 proceedings. The mechanism for meeting this responsibility should be left to the discretion of 28 individual counties.

29
30 Counsel should be appointed for indigent juveniles involved in serious offenses and child
31 dependency procedures. The court-appointed or -selected attorney in these procedures should be 32 trained specifically to work with juveniles.

33
34 Adult defendants and parents of represented juveniles who have a present and/or future ability to pay
35 part of the costs of defense should continue to be required to do so as determined by the court. The 36 establishment of procedures to place the responsibility for the cost of juvenile defense rightfully upon 37 the parents should be encouraged. The state should increase its participation in sharing the costs of 38 public defense services.

39
40 H. Coroner Services

41 The independent and investigative function of the coroner must be assured. State policy should 42 encourage the application of competent pathological techniques in the determination of the cause of 43 death.

45 The decision as to whether this responsibility should be fulfilled by an independent coroner, sheriff-
46 coroner combination, or a medical examiner must be left to the individual boards of supervisors. In 47 rural counties, the use of contract medical examiners shall be encouraged on a case-by-case basis

1 where local coroner judgment is likely to be challenged in court. A list of expert and highly qualified
2 medical examiners, where available, should be circulated to local sheriff-coroners.
3

4 I. Pre-Sentence Detention

5 1. Adults

6 a. Facility Standards

7 The state's responsibility to adopt reasonable, humane, and constitutional standards
8 for local detention facilities must be acknowledged.
9

10 Recognizing that adequate standards are dynamic and subject to constant review, 11 local governments must be assured of an opportunity to participate in the 12 development and modification of standards.
13

14 It must be recognized that the cost of upgrading detention facilities presents a nearly 15 insurmountable financial burden to most counties. Consequently, enforcement of 16 minimum standards must depend upon state financial assistance, and local costs can 17 be further mitigated by shared architectural plans and design.
18

19 b. Pre-sentence Release

20 Counties' discretion to utilize the least restrictive alternatives to pre-sentence
21 incarceration that are acceptable, in light of legal requirements and counties'
22 responsibility to protect the public, should be unfettered.
23

24 c. Bail

25 We support a bail system that would validate the release of pre-sentence persons. We 26 also believe that public protection should be a criterion considered when setting bail.
27
28

29 Any continuing county responsibility in the administration or operation of the bail
30 system must include a mechanism to finance the costs of such a system.
31

32 2. Juveniles

33 a. General

34 We view the juvenile justice system as being caught between changing societal 35 attitudes calling for harsher treatment of serious offenders and its traditional 36 orientation toward assistance and rehabilitation. Therefore, we believe a thorough
37 review of state juvenile laws is necessary. Any changes to the juvenile justice system
38 should fully involve and draw upon the experience of county officials and personnel 39 responsible for the administration of the present system. CSAC must be involved in 40 state-level discussions and decision-making processes regarding changes to the 41 juvenile justice system that will have a local impact. There must also be recognition
42 that changes do not take place overnight and that an incremental approach to change 43 may be most appropriate.

44 Counties must be given the opportunity to analyze the impact, assess the feasibility,
45 and determine the acceptability of any juvenile justice proposal that would realign
46 services from the state to the local level. As with any realignment, responsibility and 47 authority must be connected, and sufficient resources — with a built-in growth factor

1 adjustment — must be provided. Any shift in juvenile detention or incarceration
2 from large state-run facilities to local facilities — if determined to be appropriate —
3 must be pre-planned and funded by the state. However, counties believe that a class
4 of juvenile offenders exists that is best treated by the state. These juvenile offenders 5 are primarily those offenders whose behavioral problems, treatment needs, or 6 criminogenic profile are so severe as to outstrip the local ability to properly treat.

7 We support a juvenile justice system that is adapted to local circumstances and 8 increased state and federal funding support for local programs that are effective.
9

10 b. Facility Standards

11 The state’s responsibility to adopt reasonable, humane, and constitutional standards
12 for juvenile detention facilities is recognized. The adoption of any standards should 13 include an opportunity for local government to participate. The state must recognize 14 that local government requires financial assistance in order to effectively implement
15 state standards, particularly in light of the need for separating less serious offenders
16 from more serious offenders.

17 c. Treatment and Rehabilitation

18 As with adult defendants, counties should have broad discretion in developing 19 programs for juveniles.
20

21 To reduce overcrowding of juvenile institutions and to improve the chances for 22 treatment and rehabilitation of more serious offenders, it is necessary that lesser 23 offenders be diverted from the formal juvenile justice system to their families and 24 appropriate community-based programs. Each juvenile should receive individual 25 consideration and, where feasible, a risk assessment.
26

27 Counties should pursue efficiency measures that enable better use of resources and 28 should pursue additional funding from federal, state, and private sources to establish 29 appropriate programs at the county level.
30

31 Prevention and diversion programs should be developed by each county or regionally 32 to meet the local needs and circumstances, which vary greatly among urban,
33 suburban, and rural areas of the state. Programs should be monitored and evaluated 34 on an ongoing basis to ensure their ability to protect public safety and to ensure 35 compliance with applicable state and federal regulations. Nevertheless, counties 36 believe that the state must continue to offer a commitment option for those juvenile 37 offenders with the most serious criminogenic profile and most severe treatment 38 needs.
39

40 d. Bail

41 Unless transferred to adult court, juveniles should not be entitled to bail. Release on 42 their own recognizance should be held pending the outcome of the proceedings.
43

44 e. Separation of Offenders

45 We support the separation of juveniles into classes of sophistication. Separation
46 should be based upon case-by-case determinations, taking into account age, maturity,
47 need for secure custody among other factors, since separation by age or offense alone

1 can place very unsophisticated offenders among the more mature, sophisticated
2 offenders.

3
4 In view of the high cost of constructing separate juvenile hall facilities, emphasis
5 should be placed on establishment of facilities and programs that facilitate separation.
6

7 f. Removal of Serious Offenders to Adult Court

8 To the greatest extent possible, determinations regarding the fitness of serious 9 offenders should be made by the juvenile court on a case-by-case basis.

10
11 g. Jury Trial for Serious Offenders

12 Except when transferred to adult court, juveniles should not be afforded the right to a 13 jury trial — even when charged with a serious offense.
14

15 J. General Principles For Local Corrections

16 1. Purpose

17 We believe that swift and certain arrest, conviction, and punishment is a major deterrent to 18 crime. Pragmatic experience justifies the continuation of rehabilitative programs for those 19 convicted persons whom a court determines must be incarcerated and/or placed on probation.
20

21 2. Definition

22 Local corrections include maximum, medium and minimum security incarceration, work 23 furlough programs, home detention, county parole, probation, and community-based 24 programs for convicted persons.
25

26 3. Equal Treatment

27 Conditions, treatment and correctional opportunities that are equal for all detainees, 28 regardless of gender, are strongly supported. State policy must allow recognition of the 29 individual's right to privacy and the differing programmatic needs of individuals.
30

31 4. Community-Based Corrections

32 The most cost-effective method of rehabilitating convicted persons is the least restrictive 33 alternative that is close to the individual's community and should be encouraged where 34 possible.
35

36 State policy must recognize that correctional programs must always be balanced against the 37 need for public protection and that community-based corrections programs are only 38 successful to the extent that they are sufficiently funded.
39

40 5. Relationship to Human Services Systems

41 State policy toward corrections should reflect a holistic philosophy, which recognizes that 42 most persons entering the correctional system should be provided welfare, medical, mental 43 health, vocational and educational services. Efforts to rehabilitate persons entering the 44 correctional system should involve these other services, based on the needs — and, when 45 possible, a risk assessment — of the individual.
46

1 6. Relationship to Mental Health System: Mentally Ill Diversion Programs

2
3 Adequate mental health services can reduce criminal justice costs and utilization.
4 Appropriate diagnosis and treatment services, as well as increased use of diversion programs,
5 will result in positive outcomes for offenders with a mental illness. Ultimately, appropriate
6 mental health services will benefit the public safety system. Counties continue to work across 7 disciplines to achieve good outcomes for persons with mental illness and/or co-occurring
8 substance abuse issues.

9
10 7. Inmate Medical Services

11
12 CSAC supports efforts at the federal level to permit local governments to access third-party
13 payments for health care provided in detention facilities, including medical services provided 14 for those who are accused, but not yet convicted. CSAC also supports efforts to ensure 15 continuity of benefits for those detained in county detention facilities – adult and juvenile –
16 and for swift reenrollment in the appropriate benefits program upon a detainee’s release.

17
18 8. Private Programs

19 Private correctional programs should be encouraged for those categories of offenders that can 20 most effectively be rehabilitated in this manner.

21
22 K. Adult Correctional Institutions

23 Counties should continue to administer adult correctional institutions for those whose conviction(s)
24 require and/or results in local incarceration.

25
26 The state and counties should establish a collaborative planning process to review the relationship of 27 local and state corrections programs.

28
29 Counties should continue to have flexibility to build and operate facilities that meet local needs.
30 Specific methods of administering facilities and programs should not be mandated by statute.

31
32 L. Adult Probation

33 Counties should continue to provide adult probation services as a cost-effective alternative to post-34 sentence incarceration and to provide services—as determined appropriate—to persons released from 35 local correctional facilities. Counties should be given flexibility to allocate resources at the local 36 level according to the specific needs of their probation population and consideration should be 37 granted to programs that allow such discretion. State programs that provide fiscal incentives to 38 counties for keeping convicted offenders out of state institutions should be discouraged unless such 39 programs – on balance – result in system improvements. State funding should be based upon a state-40 county partnership effort that seeks to protect the public and to address the needs of individuals who 41 come into contact with the justice system. Such a partnership would acknowledge that final decisions 42 on commitments to state institutions are made by the courts, a separate branch of government, and 43 are beyond the control of counties. Some integration of county probation and state parole services
44 should be considered. Utilization of electronic monitoring for probationers and parolees should be 45 considered where cost-effective and appropriate for local needs.

1 M. General Principles For Juvenile Corrections

2 We believe that efforts to curtail the criminal behavior of young people are of the highest priority
3 need within the correctional area. The long-term costs resulting from young offenders who continue
4 their criminal activities justifies extraordinary efforts to rehabilitate them.
5

6 Efforts should be made to force parents to assume greater responsibility for the actions of their 7 children, including fines and sanctions, if necessary. Counties should be given flexibility to allocate 8 resources at the local level according to the specific needs of their probation population and 9 consideration should be granted to programs that allow such discretion. State programs that provide 10 fiscal incentives to counties for keeping convicted offenders out of state institutions should be 11 discouraged unless such programs – on balance – result in system improvements. Any program
12 should recognize that final decisions on commitments to state institutions are made by the courts, a 13 separate branch of government, and are beyond the control of counties.
14

15 N. Juvenile Correctional Institutions

16 Counties should continue to administer juvenile correctional institutions and programs for the 17 majority of youths requiring institutionalization. Retention of youths at the local level benefits
18 the state by reducing demands on programs and institutions operated by the California Division
19 of Juvenile Justice.
20

21 While counties believe that a state-operated rehabilitation and detention system is a necessary
22 component of the continuum of services for juvenile offenders, CSAC opposes efforts that would 23 require any additional county subsidy of that system. The state should provide subvention for 24 these activities at a reasonable level, with provisions for escalation so that actual expenses will 25 be met.
26

27 O. Juvenile Probation

28 Counties should continue to provide juvenile probation services as a cost-effective alternative to 29 post-adjudication and to provide juvenile probation services to individual youths and their families
30 after the youth’s release from a local correctional facility.
31

32 Truants, run-a-ways, and youths who are beyond the control of their parents should continue to be 33 removed from the justice system except in unusual circumstances. These youths should be the 34 responsibility of their parents and the community, not the government. Imposing fines and/or 35 sanctions on parents to prompt their participation in their children’s lives and involvement in the 36 process should remain an option.
37

38 P. Human Services System Referral of Juveniles

39 State policy toward juvenile corrections must be built on the realization that a juvenile offender may 40 be more appropriately served in the human services system. Considering the high suicide potential 41 of youths held in detention facilities and, acknowledging the fact that juvenile offenses are more 42 often impulse activities than are adult offenses, juvenile cases and placement decisions should be 43 reviewed more closely under this light.
44

45 Q. Federal Criminal Justice Assistance

46 The federal government should continue to provide funding for projects that improve the operation
47 and efficiency of the justice system and that improve the quality of justice. Such programs should

1 provide for maximum local discretion in designing programs that are consistent with local needs and 2 objectives.

3
4 Section 3: JUDICIAL BRANCH MATTERS

5 A. Trial Court Management

6 The recognized need for greater uniformity and efficiency in the trial courts must be balanced against 7 the need for a court system that is responsive and adaptable to unique local circumstances. Any 8 statewide administrative structure must provide a mechanism for consideration of local needs.

9
10 B. Trial Court Structure

11 We support a unified consolidated trial court system of general jurisdiction that maintains the 12 accessibility provided by existing trial courts. The state shall continue to accept financial 13 responsibility for any increased costs resulting from a unified system.

14
15 C. Trial Court Financing

16 Sole responsibility for the costs of trial court operations should reside with the state, not the counties.
17 Nevertheless, counties continue to bear the fiscal responsibility for several local judicial services that 18 are driven by state policy decision over which counties have little or no control. We strongly believe 19 that it is appropriate for the state to assume greater fiscal responsibility for other justice services
20 related to trial courts, including drug courts. Further, we urge that the definition of court operations
21 financed by the state should include the district attorney, the public defender, court appointed 22 counsel, and probation.

23
24 D. Trial Court Facilities

25
26 While counties continue to support efforts to ensure appropriate transfer of trial court facilities to the 27 state, the process for transfer must be both equitable and fair. Further, adequate time must be 28 provided to permit local negotiations for the transfer of these facilities, pursuant to an acceptable
29 agreement between counties and the state.

30
31 E. Court Services

32 Although court operation services are the responsibility of the state, certain county services provided
33 by probation and sheriff departments are directly supportive of the trial courts. Bail and own
34 recognizance investigations, as well as pre-sentence reports, should be provided by probation, sheriff,
35 and other county departments to avoid duplication of functions, but their costs should be recognized
36 as part of the cost of operating trial courts.

37
38 F. Jurors and Juries

39 Counties should be encouraged to support programs that maximize use of potential jurors and 40 minimize unproductive waiting time. These programs can save money, while encouraging citizens to 41 serve as jurors. These efforts must consider local needs and circumstances. To further promote 42 efficiency, counties support the use of fewer than twelve person juries in civil cases.

43
44 Section 4: FAMILY VIOLENCE

45 CSAC remains committed to raising awareness of the toll of family violence on families and 46 communities by supporting efforts that target family violence prevention, intervention and treatment.
47 Specific strategies for early intervention and success should be developed through cooperation

1 between state and local governments, as well as community, and private organizations addressing
2 family violence issues.
3

4 Section 5: GOVERNMENT LIABILITY

5 The current government liability system is out of balance. It functions almost exclusively as a source
6 of compensation for injured parties. Other objectives of this system, such as the deterrence of 7 wrongful conduct and protection of governmental decision-making, have been largely ignored.
8 Moreover, as a compensatory system of ever-increasing proportions, it is unplanned, unpredictable
9 and fiscally unsound – both for the legitimate claimant and for the taxpayers who fund public 10 agencies.
11

12 Among the principal causes of these problems is the philosophy – expressed in statutes and decisions
13 narrowing governmental immunities under the Tort Claims Act – that private loss should be shifted 14 to society where possible on the basis of shared risk, irrespective of fault or responsibility in the 15 traditional tort law sense.
16

17 The expansion of government liability over recent years has had the salutary effect of forcing public
18 agencies to evaluate their activities in terms of risk and to adopt risk management practices.
19 However, liability consciousness is eroding the independent judgment of public decision-makers. In 20 many instances, mandated services are being performed at lower levels and non-mandated services
21 are being reduced or eliminated altogether. Increasingly, funds and efforts are being diverted from 22 programs serving the public to the insurance and legal judicial systems.
23

24 Until recently, there appeared to be no end to expansion of government liability costs. Now, 25 however, the "deep pocket" has been cut off. Insurance is either unavailable or cost prohibitive and 26 tax revenues are severely limited. Moreover, restricted revenue authority not only curtails the ability 27 of public entities to pay, but also increases exposure to liability by reducing funding for maintenance
28 and repair programs. As a result, public entities and ultimately, the Legislature, face difficult fiscal 29 decisions when trying to balance between the provision of governmental service and the continued
30 expansion of government liability.
31

32 There is a need for data on the actual cost impacts of government tort liability. As a result of previous 33 CSAC efforts, insurance costs for counties are fairly well documented. However, more information is 34 needed about the cost of settlements and awards and about the very heavy "transactional costs" of 35 administering and defending claims. We also need more information about the programmatic 36 decisions being forced upon public entities: e.g., what activities are being dropped because of high 37 liability? CSAC and its member counties must attempt to fill this information gap.
38

39 CSAC should advocate for the establishment of reasonable limits upon government liability and the 40 balancing of compensatory function of the present system with the public interests in efficient,
41 fiscally sound government. This does not imply a return to "sovereign immunity" concepts or a 42 general turning away of injured parties. It simply recognizes, as did the original Tort Claims Act, 43 that: (1) government should not be more liable than private parties, and (2) that in some cases there is 44 reason for government to be less liable than private parties. It must be remembered that government
45 exists to provide essential services to people and most of these services could not be provided
46 otherwise. A private party faced with risks that are inherent in many government services would drop 47 the activity and take up another line of work. Government does not have that option.
48

49 In attempting to limit government liability, CSAC's efforts should bring governmental liability into 50 balance with the degree of fault and need for governmental service.

1
2 In advocating an "era of limits" in government liability, CSAC should take the view of the taxpayer
3 rather than that of counties per se. At all governmental levels, it is the taxpayer who carries the real
4 burden of government liability and has most at stake in bringing the present system into better
5 balance. In this regard, it should be remembered that the insurance industry is not a shield, real or 6 imagined, between the claimant and the taxpayer.
